

PRESENTERS

Kesia Denhardt, Stace Hammond, Auckland

Kesia has practised family law exclusively since 2009. She handles all types of matters, including ones involving family violence. Kesia has written and presented legal seminars on family law issues, authored articles for a variety of legal publications, and is a member of a number of committees within the profession. She is passionate about representing clients confronted with family violence and has been appointed as an ambassador of White Ribbon New Zealand in recognition of her work assisting and supporting victims of violence.

Arran Hunt, Stace Hammond, Auckland

Arran started practising law after having a career in technology. His practice is now largely focused around the internet and its use in society, both for commercial clients and individuals. Arran has acted for a number of clients under the Harmful Digital Communications Act 2015, including the first civil matter. He has spoken at several conferences on the topic, presented to the select committee on the recent changes to the legislation, and was recognised in Parliament as a leading expert on the field. Arran believes that everyone has the right to feel safe when online, and that there is an unfortunate disconnect, where people see the online world as being something different from reality.

The statements and conclusions contained in this book are those of the author(s) only and not those of the New Zealand Law Society. This book has been prepared for the purpose of a Continuing Legal Education course. It is not intended to be a comprehensive statement of the law or practice, and should not be relied upon as such. If advice on the law is required, it should be sought on a formal, professional basis.
