

PRESENTERS

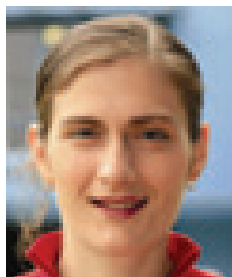

David Johnstone, Meredith Connell, Auckland

David is an experienced trial and appellate lawyer. His focus in recent years has been upon criminal prosecution, appeals and judicial review of decisions touching upon the criminal justice process. His particular specialty has been organised (profit-motivated) crime, including drug and gang-related crime, corruption, immigration and benefit fraud, and actions to recover criminal proceeds. David was the Solicitor-General's regular counsel in proceedings brought under the Proceeds of Crime Act 1991 in the greater Auckland area. He anticipates a similar role for the Commissioner of Police in Criminal Proceeds (Recovery) Act 2009 proceedings.

Greg Jones, Barrister, Sydney*

Greg was employed by the Australian Federal Police in its financial investigations team for 11 years before graduating in commerce and law and commencing practice as a barrister in Sydney. He specialises in the defence of assets forfeiture under the Federal and NSW legislation and has lectured widely to both police and lawyers on that legislation and its implementation. Greg was junior counsel in a recent case in front of a bench of seven of the High Court of Australia which ruled that restraining orders under the NSW legislation were invalid.

Dr Heather McKenzie, Raymond Donnelly & Co, Christchurch

Heather graduated from the University of Canterbury in 2007 and holds the degrees of PhD, LLB(Hons), and BA(Hons). She spent two years as a Judges' Clerk in the Auckland High Court from 2007 – 2008. In addition to judicial clerking, she was Clerk to the Rules Committee. In 2009 she started as a junior Crown prosecutor at Raymond Donnelly & Co in Christchurch.

Brent Stanaway, Raymond Donnelly & Co, Christchurch

Brent Stanaway has been a Crown Prosecutor at Raymond Donnelly & Co for 30 years and has been the Crown Solicitor for Christchurch and Greymouth since 1992. He has prosecuted many high profile criminal jury trials and has an established criminal and regulatory law appellate practice having appeared many times in the Court of Appeal and in the Privy Council and Supreme Court. Brent has had an active involvement with the implementation of the Proceeds of Crime Act 1991, acting on many occasions for the Solicitor-General on applications for restraint and forfeiture. He is an active member of the Serious Fraud Office prosecution panel and is a member of the NZ Lawyers and Conveyancers Disciplinary Tribunal.
