

PRESENTER

Mark Gobbi, Parliamentary Counsel, Parliamentary Counsel Office, Wellington

Mark is currently serving as a parliamentary counsel (drafting team manager) in the Parliamentary Counsel Office, an adjunct lecturer at Victoria University's Faculty of Law, and a special advisor to the New Zealand Yearbook of International Law. After some time in private practice, Mark joined the Law Reform Division of the Department of Justice, where he specialised in Bill of Rights vetting, constitutional design, electoral law, and intellectual property. At Justice, Mark developed an interest in the legislative process and the ways in which New Zealand implements its international obligations, which, after special project work for the Ministry of Transport, led him to his present roles.
