

PRESENTER

Horiana Irwin-Easthope, Kahui Legal, Wellington

Horiana specialises in resource management, litigation and Treaty of Waitangi settlements with a strong focus on RMA consenting and natural resource development. She primarily advises Māori clients (including land trusts and Post Settlement Governance Entities) and has particular experience working with hapū and iwi collectives in the context of environmental and commercial negotiations. Horiana has appeared in a range of courts and tribunals including the Supreme Court and at the Board of Inquiry level. Prior to joining Kahui Legal, she worked in the Resource Management, Litigation and Māori Legal teams at Russell McVeagh. In 2014 Horiana graduated with an LL.M from Harvard Law School. Her thesis is entitled New Zealand's EEZ environmental regulatory regime: A step backwards for Iwi Māori engagement and authority in environmental regulation.

CONTENTS

THE INCREASING AND ENDURING IMPORTANCE OF TIKANGA MĀORI AND CULTURAL EVIDENCE IN THE ENVIRONMENT COURT.....	1
INTRODUCTION	1
TIKANGA MĀORI	2
STATUTORY CONTEXT – RESOURCE MANAGEMENT ACT 1991	6
Other statutory provisions in environmental legislation	7
BROADER CONTEXT.....	7
Waitangi Tribunal	8
Treaty of Waitangi Settlements	8
Tikanga Māori in the law (outside of environmental law): examples	9
CULTURAL EVIDENCE.....	11
Courts’ approach(es)	12
Some (further) guidance for practitioners	16
CONCLUDING COMMENTS.....	18