

PRESENTERS

John Edwards, Barrister, Wellington

John has been practicing information law since 1990, when he worked as an investigating officer with the Office of the Ombudsmen. After helping the first Privacy Commissioner set up his office and implement the Privacy Act in 1993, he began a niche practice in the field. John has published internationally on the subject, and frequently provides media commentary on privacy law. He was a consultant to the Law Commission on its privacy law project. John has appeared in the Human Rights Review Tribunal and the High Court on privacy and related matters.

Dr Paul Roth, Faculty of Law, University of Otago, Dunedin

Paul Roth is a Professor of Law at the University of Otago. He has researched and practiced in the privacy law area for about 20 years. He has written widely in the field, including Privacy Law and Practice (LexisNexis), a commentary on the Privacy Act. He wrote the report for the European Union on New Zealand's privacy law as part of the process that led to New Zealand's law being deemed "adequate" for the purposes of the EU personal data directive.

The statements and conclusions contained in this booklet are those of the author(s) only and not those of the New Zealand Law Society. This booklet has been prepared for the purpose of a Continuing Legal Education course. It is not intended to be a comprehensive statement of the law or practice, and should not be relied upon as such. If advice on the law is required, it should be sought on a formal, professional basis.
